Description of Property and Eligibility Determination: (Use continuation sheet if necessary and attach map and photo)

The Harmony Grove Survey District meets the requirements of Criterion C for its architecture, as it is significant primarily for the architecture of its buildings, each of which has qualities unique within the district, and including Spring Bank (F-3-22) which is already listed in the National Register in 1984 for its eclectic Gothic Revival and Italianate style. Harmony developed as a mill village. The town was bifurcated by the construction of the US 15 in the 1970's, causing the loss of a number of buildings. Additional buildings have been lost over the years to development. As an example of mid to late 19th century community planning, the survey district is of minor significance because of demolitions of key buildings over the mid-20th century, including the railroad station, post office, and freight warehouse, two stores, the stone Worman's Mill of the early 19th century and a second church.

The Harmony Grove Survey District encompasses about 10 acres and includes six contributing residences, one unoccupied log house, an unoccupied former frame church, and one non-contributing residence. The district is the center of the 19th century village which developed from about 1820 to the first decade of the 20th century near Worman's Mill, now demolished. The earliest structures in the village are the unoccupied log house which may be a circa 1840 slave house associated with the Worman House, a circa 1870 brick farmhouse with several frame outbuildings of about the same period. Also in the district is Spring Bank (F-3-22), individually listed in the National Register, which is an 1880 brick architectural landmark with extravagant decorative detail in the Gothic Revival and Italianate styles. One of the other contributing residences was built in 1876 as the schoolhouse and, after its closing in 1910, was converted to a tea room in 1915 and to a residence in 1940. The Harmony Grove District is significant for the architecture of the buildings, each of which has unique qualities within the district and represent the vernacular and Gothic Revival/Italianate styles among domestic, religious, and educational buildings.

The Harmony Grove Survey District encompasses an area of about 10 acres centered on the 19th century village located on the east and west sides of Worman's Mill Road just east of U.S. 15 about two miles north of Frederick (City), Frederick County, Maryland. The district is principally residential and includes five contributing dwellings ranging in date from about 1840 to about 1890, an unoccupied former church built in 1878, and an unoccupied log dwelling possibly built about 1840 which is currently located within the Frederick corporate limits which adjoin the survey district boundary on the east and west, and a non-contributing modern residence. One of the contributing houses is Spring Bank (F-3-22), individually listed in the National Register in 1984 and significant for its outstanding architectural style combining Italianate and Gothic Revival details. It is currently a residence and bed and breakfast inn. Another residence in the district was originally the 1876 school. Bordering the survey district on the west is a railroad line, originally built in 1872-73 as the Frederick & Pennsylvania Railroad and now owned by the Maryland State Railroad Administration. The village at its greatest extent in the period 1875-1940 included a brick and frame station, post office, and store with associated outbuildings on the west side of the rail line north of Spring Bank and the current outline of the district. A historic early grist mill, Worman's Mill (demolished), was located south of the district near the junction of Worman's Mill Road and MD 26 and other small shops and stores were located along the road between it and the center of the current survey district. With the decline of the railroad after 1945, and the rise of automobile use, the village of Harmony Grove was reduced by demolitions to its present size, which includes seven additional dwellings along the road just south of the survey district boundary. These houses were excluded because of their recent construction dates or severe loss of integrity.

The buildings in the district include two large brick houses located on the east side of the road near the northern end, the Worman House and Spring Bank, which have a high level of architectural sophistication compared to the modest frame and log structures on the west side of the road. The brick 1876 schoolhouse is the only non-wood framed structure on the west side of the road. The wood buildings have asbestos shingle, vinyl, and German siding, and the unoccupied log house has board and batten siding except on the south elevation, where the log structure is exposed. Roofs are gabled with standing seam metal or modern composition and the roofs of the large brick houses are slate and hipped with numerous cross gables, especially in the Spring Bank roofline. Both of these houses have several contributing outbuildings, principally frame and brick barns, garages or carriage houses, sheds, and smokehouses. However, Spring Bank's outbuildings include a gas house, presumably an original feature supplying gas for lighting in the 1880 house. The condition of most of the principal structures is good to excellent and all have been altered in varying degrees. The log outbuilding is in the most precarious physical condition, being open to weather and vandalism. Following are brief descriptions of the contributing buildings:

Prepare both a summary paragraph of significance and a general statement of history and support.

The Harmony Grove Survey District is significant primarily for the architecture of its buildings, each of which has qualities unique within the district and one, Spring Bank (F-3-22) which is individually important for its eclectic Gothic Revival and Italianate style, for which it was listed in the National Register in 1984. The buildings include a simple circa 1840 log house, possibly a slave house, a second log dwelling of the same period with an unusual integral porch supporting part of the upper half-story, an 1876 brick schoolhouse converted to a dwelling, a dated 1878 frame church which has had little exterior alteration since its construction, a vernacular frame house of about 1875 with segmental arched openings and a Gothic Revival gable window, and a circa 1870 brick vernacular house with a patterned slate pped roof, a rear wing with balustraded porches, and several contemporary frame outbuildings. As an example of mid and late 19th century community planning, the survey district is of minor significance because of demolitions of key buildings over the mid-20th century, including the railroad station, post office, and freight warehouse, two stores, the stone Worman's Mill of the early 19th century, and a second church. The construction of U.S. 15 in the 1960's and 1970's caused many of the demolitions and re-routed the road traffic from the former Frederick-Emmitsburg Turnpike (now Worman's Mill Road) to bypass the village. The result was the loss of economic demand which had sustained the village industries and shops.

Harmony Grove developed as a mill village as did many early 19th century Frederick County communities, with the homes and shops of associated mill employees, owners, and supporting craftsmen growing up along the main access to the mill. Churches and schools followed closely, and, in 1872-73, the Frederick & Pennsylvania Railroad, which provided further sustenance to the commercial life of the village, as well as access to the larger towns of Frederick and Walkersville. Shortly thereafter, a post office, store, and station building was built and Spring Bank, the country home of a wealthy Frederick businessman was erected in 1880. This signaled a change in Harmony Grove from the working class homes and stores to the fine homes of people who earned their living outside the village. Although the railroad eventually declined and the buildings associated with its arrival were later demolished, the center of the town represented in the survey district remained virtually intact. In the early 20th century, the closing of the school in 1910 represents the beginning of this decline. The post office closed in 1919 and was demolished in the 1970's for the bifurcation of U.S. 15.

Spring Bank (NR, F-3-22), 7945 Worman's Mill Road: The 2-1/2 story brick mansion was built in 1880 (dated stone in structure) by George Houck. The five bays in the west elevation are spanned by a one-story bracketed porch and an off-center cross gable tops the southern three bays. The south elevation has a projecting bay window near the southwest corner and a side entrance with a bracketed entry porch. Above the porch is a window under a bellcast hood with console brackets. A balustrade with corner posts and finials tops the entry porch roof. Double interior end chimneys rise at the north and south gable ends of the patterned slate roof. At the junction of the cross gables is a square cupola with a hipped slate roof and groups of three arched windows on each side. At the rear of the house is a two-story brick ell which was extended in the 1920's. A two-story open porch faces south and a second, deteriorated porch is located on the north side of the ell. A third porch is attached to the east end of the ell, part of the 1920's addition. The interior retains much of its original trim, mantels in painted slate, interior shutters, plaster ornamentation, and hardwood floors. The house is a spectacularly fine example of the eclectic styles of the late 19th century combining elements of the Gothic Revival and the Italianate styles. The exterior and interior trim is highly sophisticated and complete. Local craftsmen Charles G. Walter and O. F. Bond are documented as two of the builders of the house. In the 1882 History of Western Maryland by Scharf, it was described as one of the finest and most costly in the County. Associated with the house are a brick gas house, part of the lighting system, a brick smokehouse, a brick privy, and a brick carriage house, all contemporary with the house. In 1926, Charles G. Bowers, then an architecture student whose family owned Spring Bank during the early 20th century, and later a prominent Frederick architect, altered some window openings on the west elevation and designed the easternmost extension to the service wing. Spring Bank displays Frederick County Landmarks Foundation plaque number 216. Owner: Raymond L. & Beverly A. Compton, 7945 Worman's Mill Rd., Frederick, MD 21701.

Worman House, 7935 Worman's Mill Rd.: The two-story brick house appears to date from about 1850, having the basic vernacular form of main section and rear wing, although the patterned slate hipped roof with central chimneys may be an alteration of the last quarter of the 19th century. Information supplied to the Frederick County Landmarks Foundation for plaque no. 88 states that oral tradition gives the date of construction as about 1870, built by the widow of William D. Worman, who died in 1868. The brick is 6:1 American bond. The west elevation has five bays and a cross gable with a center entrance with a transom and sidelights. Console brackets ornament the transom surround. The window openings have gauged flat arches with 6/6 sash, wood sills, and louvred shutters. In the cross gable is a round-arched 2/2 window. A one-story porch with chamfered posts extends across the west elevation. On the south gable end is a one-story bay window. A two-story rear wing extends eastward from the main section. A two-story open porch with balustrades is located on the south elevation. The interior was inaccessible for this survey. Outbuildings associated with the house include a small frame barn now used as a garage, a frame privy, a frame shed of undetermined original use, a frame garden shed which was probably originally a hog barn, and an open-sided frame wood shed. All have vertical board and batten siding with standing seam metal roofs. They appear to date from about 1875-1900. At some distance south of the house is the unoccupied log outbuilding which is believed by local residents to have been a slave house on the Worman farm. Its description follows this section. The Worman farm was established at least by 1820 with the purchase of 250 acres by Moses Worman. Worman operated a grist mill, no longer extant, near the present intersection of MD 26 and Worman's Mill Road. His descendants retained the property until the late 1950's. The house is a good example of a vernacular brick dwelling of the third quarter of the 19th century with later alterations, principally the roofline. The remaining outbuildings suggest the extent and wealth of the Worman family over most of the 19th and early 20th centuries. Owner: Joanne D. Supplee, 7935 Worman's Mill Rd., Frederick, MD 21701.

Log house: The deteriorated one-story log house is located on the east side of Worman's Mill Road opposite the house at 7930 Worman's Mill Rd. The house is on land within the Frederick corporate limits. An open field which separates the house from the Worman House about 100 yards to the north is also within the corporate limits. The building has board and batten siding on the west, north, and east elevations, and has been removed on the south elevation, revealing the log structure. The rectangular building has a two-bay west elevation with a vertical board door in the south bay. The windows are missing or boarded. The shingled gable roof is covered with standing seam metal. On the east elevation are two bays with a second doorway. The north elevation has a single window opening and the south elevation has a brick infill section, indicating the location of a removed exterior chimney stack. The interior has two rooms with a molded chair rail and early 20th century wallpaper over the plaster and lath interior walls. A winding stair in the southwest corner leads to the attic loft. Local tradition in Harmony Grove identifies the house as a slave house on the Worman farm and it may date from about 1840, based on its plan and materials. Various temporary tenants have lived in the house over the early 20th century and it has been unoccupied for many years. Owner: G. Hunter Bowers, 6E East St., Frederick, MD 21701.

7936 Worman's Mill Road, former schoolhouse: The 1-1/2 story brick residence was built in 1876 as the Harmony Grove Primary School. Originally it had a three-bay gable facade on the east at the edge of the road with an open cupola and bell on the roof ridge. The doorway was in the center with a plain transom. The north and south elevations had three bays with 6/6 windows. A brick chimney stack was located against the west gable end. The school closed in 1910 and the building was converted to the Brocton Orchard Tea Room in 1915 by Thomas and Maria Hayward. Extensive alterations were done, both interior and exterior, but the tea room was only open for one year. In 1940, the current owners, Carl and Evelyn Brown purchased the building and made further alterations over several years to convert it to residential use. These included an exterior brick chimney in place of the original entrance on the east gable end and a concrete block extension on the north elevation with an adjoining screened porch. Dormers were added to the upper half-story created in the attic. The roof is now composition material. Louvred shutters flank the 6/6 windows in gauged-arched openings. The site of the building was purchased for school use in 1844 from Moses Worman and local oral tradition refers to a log school prior to the 1876 brick building. Owner: Carl E. & Evelyn Brown, 7936 Worman's Mill Rd., Frederick, MD 21701.

7934 Worman's Mill Rd.: The 1-1/2 story log house has a distinctive integral one-story porch over which the upper half story extends with small paired 2/2 sash in two bays. The exterior of the house is covered with asbestos shingle siding and the roof is standing seam metal. The first story has three bays with a center entrance and 6/6 sash. An interior end chimney is located at the north gable end. A 1-1/2 story rear wing extends to the west and has an additional shed extension. A non-contributing metal garage is also located west of the house. Title research does not suggest its construction date or use, but the materials and form are consistent with vernacular residences of the period about 1840-1850. Owner: Richard A. & Evelyn V. Creager, 58 Hampton Place, Walkersville, MD 21793.

Harmony Grove Union Chapel: The frame, one-story former church is located on the west side of the road between 7932 and 7930 Worman's Mill Rd. Built in 1878, it has german siding and a gable facade on the east end with double entrances. The doors are 4-panel, with three-light transoms above. A semi-circular sign in the gable gives the name and the date of the building. The north and south elevations have three bays with 6/6 sash and some louvred shutters still in place. The cornice is boxed and has returns on the gable ends. Interior chimneys are located on the north and south elevations. The west elevation has two bays with deteriorated shutters over the windows. The interior was not accessible, but in past years, the building has been used as a community meeting hall. It is currently in the process of transfer to Ms. Diane Smoley, resident of 7930 Worman's Mill, who plans to use it as an architectural office and studio. The church represents a common occurrence in rural congregations in the 19th century, a divergence of opinion in a church group, after which dissenting members withdrew and built another church. In Harmony Grove, this split took place in the local Methodist Protestant church (demolished), which formerly stood west of the current survey district in the present right-of-way of U.S. 15.

7930 Worman's Mill Rd.: The two-story frame house has three bays with a cross gable and german siding. A 2/2 Gothic window is located in the gable. A one-story porch with square piers and dentil trim extends across the east elevation. The window and door openings have segmental arches, and the doorway has a 2-light transom and sidelights. The sash is 2/2. Interior end chimneys rise above the standing seam metal roof. A 2-story rear wing adjoins the main section on the west. On the south side of the wing is an integral two-story open porch. A one-story shed addition is on the west end of the wing. The title research on the property does not indicate its origin, but the arched window openings and other trim suggest the last quarter of the 19th century. Owner: Raymond A. and Diane G. Smoley, 7930 Worman's Mill Rd., Frederick, MD 21701.
